1. Introduction

1.1 Purpose

This document discusses the further investigation into the project design which has been undertaken since the release of the Project Impact Report in May 2011 and the results are summarised within. It also responds to the submissions received from members of the public, community groups, local government and state government agencies.

This Supplement Report therefore requires the reader to have read the Project Impact Report for a full picture of the project.

The Project Impact Report was the first public document about the proposal to duplicate the Southern Expressway. It presented the need for the duplication, illustrated its initial concept and examined the potential traffic, economic, social and environmental effects.

Road users, residents, businesses, government organisations and everyone with an interest in the project were encouraged to evaluate it, ask questions and provide feedback.

Information days were held between May and June, which were attended by over 300 people.

Feedback from the community and key stakeholders including submissions to the Project Impact Report have been analysed and considered resulting in changes to the project design where appropriate.

The Project Impact Report and this Supplement have been used, along with other determining factors, for the approval of the project by the South Australian Government.
